☞ If you deconstruct Greece, you will in the end see an olive tree, a grapevine, and a boat remain. That is, as much, you reconstruct her.☞

“Odysseas Elytis” Nobel price literature 1979

“But when we were come down to the ship and the sea, we first of all drew the ship into the divine sea; and we placed a mast and armena in the black ship. And taking the sheep we put them on board; and we ourselves also embarked grieving, shedding the warm tear.

And fair-haired Circe, an awful goddess, possessing human speech, sent behind our dark-blue-prowed ship a moist wind that filled the armena, an excellent companion, And we sat down making use of each of the instruments in the ship; and the wind and the pilot directed it. And the armena of it passing over the the sea were stretched out the whole day.”

Homer's Odyssey, rhapsody ñ

armeno: ancient Greek word for the sails of a ship
